I think that the mom of this boy watches him too much on facebook.
She looks at everything that he posts.
She is intrusive.

2. On 24 February 2012, by Jeanne

I think that this boy's mom gets into this private life and the boy doesn't have freedom.
I think it's a bad idea.
For me this boy's mom posts a little shocking photos.
I don't have a facebook profile and neither has my mom.

3. On 24 February 2012, by Julie

I think that the mom does not trust her children enough.
She is too much inquisitive but she wants to protect and to watch her children.

4. On 24 February 2012, by Farah

I think this boy doesn't talk of his life to his mom because she needs to spy on him. I think it's bad, all of us need privacy.

5. On 25 February 2012, by Dilan.M

I think it's not right to look at what others are doing. I think it would be better that everyone lives his life. This can create conflicts in the family.

6. On 25 February 2012, by ines

I think that the way that this mom is keeping in touch with her children is too much. She spies on them and I don't think that the children would like that. I wouldn't like it if my parents did that to me. My mom doesn't have a Facebook account. My dad has got a Facebook account but he doesn't use it at all, so he is not a part of my Facebook friends.

7. On 26 February 2012, by Mehdi

I think that the mother made good, but not correct. She is concerned about her son "which is a good thing" but she does so incorrectly. To summarize, I think that the end does not justify the means. 🙄

8. On 26 February 2012, by Yacine

I think it's bad for the child. I would not like to be in his place. My parents don't have a FB account. In my opinion you must keep your distance on Facebook.

9. On 27 February 2012, by Sheherazade

I think that the mom gets a little bit right because she just wants to keep in touch with her son. But she should avoid to encroach on her son's life. I don't have any FB account so I don't have this kind of problems, I think I will just be still and a bit angry if my parents interfere in my privacy.

10. On 27 February 2012, by Anaïs

I think the mom watches her son too much! She regularly visits his facebook profile, and look who the people he photographed are.
Instead of spying on her son on Facebook, she should talk face to face with him.
My parents do not have facebook profiles but if one day they make a facebook profile I will not accept that they spy on me as the boy's mother does. 😊

11. On 28 February 2012, by Marine

This mother gives the impression that she does not rely on him. It is her child, she should leave him more freedom because he seems already big. This boy does not have a private life anymore.
It is annoying.
I am satisfied not to have Facebook and that my mother has no profile.

12. On 29 February 2012, by Loïc

I think that her son doesn't know how to protect himself because if he posts his photos it is that it does not disturb him.

13. On 29 February 2012, by Loïc

If I didn't want my mother to spy on me, I would post everything only to my friends and would refuse to accept my mother as a friend.

14. On 29 February 2012, by Line.A

I think what the mother did is wrong especially when she sent a message on twitter to the girl named Jenny. I hate this way of spying on children. Parents should leave their children do whatever they want on facebook or other social networks if their children are adults. If their children are not adults, parents should pay a little attention about their children's posts and pictures. Maybe this mother is acting like this because the relationship between her and her child is not very strong and her child doesn't talk much with her about his personal life so she looks at his profile, sees who his friends are, sees the conversations between him and his friends... I understand her but I don't like this way of knowing things about her son. She should just ask him about his personal life and stop spying on him the way she does. My parents have facebook and they are part of my friends' list. I accepted their friend requests because I know what I do on facebook is not wrong to hide it from them.

15. On 29 February 2012, by Souad

I think what his mother does is an invasion of privacy, she looks at everything that he does. She must let him have his own life outside the family cocoon. I think that for the majority of children it's a nightmare to have their parents as friends on facebook but if he doesn't have any problem with his parents, I can't see any problem with adding them. My parents don't have a facebook account but if they had one, I wouldn't accept them because I wouldn't like that they do the same thing with me.

16. On 29 February 2012, by Abdel-hadi

I think this mom is very involved in her son's life. She doesn't let him live his life. She is so attached to her son that she considers him a small child. My father has facebook and he is in my friends' list but it's not like this mother. He respects my privacy. Normally the social network is positive for communication but in this case it is negative. But I'm sure this mother is like that to protect her son and not to be annoying but she has to let her son have a private life despite the fact that she likes to share a good feeling 😊

17. On 29 February 2012, by E. Artault

Hi everyone 😊

What do you think of this comment (reaction to the video on youtube) ?

"You see this is why you make two Facebook pages...

One that is nice and conservative (your real name)

And the other that's a nickname which you link your friends through your smart phone."

(vjm3)

Don't forget to react to the others' comments ! See the toolbox to express your opinion.

Good luck and see you on Monday.

18. On 29 February 2012, by E. Artault

I agree with you, Julie but is it the right way to protect her children ?

19. On 29 February 2012, by E. Artault

True, Abdel-Hadi, about the fact that social networks are positive for communication but do you communicate with your dad via FB ? What's the point of communicating with your close family via social networks ?

20. On 29 February 2012, by E. Artault

Souad, imagine your parents had a FB account, how would they react if you refused to be part of their friends like Stan in the South Park episode we watched ?

21. On 29 February 2012, by E. Artault

Line, do you talk a lot to your parents about your private life ? When you're at university, do you think you'll tell them everything you do or introduce them to all the new people you meet ?

22. On 29 February 2012, by E. Artault

Thanks for your comment on youtube, Mehdi 😊

23. On 01 March 2012, by Clément

I think the mother watches over her children. She is too afraid to do much.

24. On 01 March 2012, by Amine

I think the mother is too inquisitive, especially when she watches the photos of her son's friends. If she wants her son not to do whatever he wants on facebook she should have taught him that he should not do anything on the web instead of spying on him.

25. On 02 March 2012, by Souad

Mrs Artault, I think that they are going to believe that I hide something from them. I would simply explain to them that I don't want them to look at everything I do on facebook and I need some privacy.

26. On 02 March 2012, by Farah

I agree with Dilan because the mom talks to her son's girlfriend under a pseudo and she threatens her.

27. On 02 March 2012, by Mehdi

I think the mother is protective but as I said in the previous comment it is with the wrong tools.

28. On 02 March 2012, by Sheherazade

I agree with Julie I think that the mom is trying to protect her son like she has always done. She just wants to do right for her son because she loves him. I know that it's a bit inappropriate to observe him but she needs to talk with him and see everything that he does. I suppose that it's hard for her because he doesn't live with her anymore so maybe she must feel alone. I know that it's not an excuse for spying on her son but it's necessary to be sympathetic with this mom she just wants the best for her son even if she doesn't really do it. I think that it's not really wrong to follow every move that he makes. She is entitled to be concerned about the daytime life of her son. However she must let him live his life and follow his own way. She should let him live his life, make mistakes and meet other people even if she disagrees and is suspicious with that.

29. On 02 March 2012, by Cheyma

In my opinion, this Gloria, is far too much intrusive in her son's life.
On the one hand, I think that it's an amazing and modern way to keep in touch with his mom through social networking websites.
On the other hand, Gloria may have better things to do in her life than spy on her son and pretend to be a student on Twitter. I really hate that because it's very dishonest. I guess that the mom has time to waste to spend so much time on social networking websites.
Finally, I think that Jeff can not express himself freely because of his mother.
I also noticed that Jenny is now totally ashamed because of the bold pictures which were seen by many people in the world.

30. On 03 March 2012, by Line.A

No. I don't talk to my parents about my private life and I will never do. When I am at university, I won't tell them everything I do or introduce them to all the new people I meet. But having them on facebook won't be a problem for me because facebook doesn't have lots of private information about my life.

31. On 03 March 2012, by Nassim.A

I think Gloria is excessive because she doesn't leave a private life to her son. But I'm writing in full knowledge of the facts! My mother has a Facebook profile, sometimes watches my profile ; but not as to become hooked on Facebook.

32. On 03 March 2012, by Maya

I think the mom is wrong to spy on her son. I don't think it will bring them any closer. On the contrary, it will keep them away. I think she does that because her son is not really attentive to his mom, he wants to enjoy his youth and prefers to be with his friends than his mom. She doesn't accept that and doesn't want him to grow up. I think that what she has done to her son's girlfriend is too much. She should talk with her son about that. My parents are on facebook and I added them because I know they trust me and they will never spy on me.

33. On 03 March 2012, by Fabien

I think the mother wants to watch her children, but by doing it on facebook, she is doing it wrong.

34. On 03 March 2012, by Clément

I agree with Fabien.

35. On 03 March 2012, by ines

Obviously I understand, but I don't agree with people who say that they will never accept their parents as friends on Facebook. That suggests that they have something to hide from their parents, perhaps they do things they know their parents wouldn't like to see. The children may not think about this fact, but this is why the parents want to have them as friends on Facebook, to see what they really do and why they did not accept their request (to be a friend on Facebook). In my opinion, if your parents respect you and trust you, moreover if you have nothing to reproach yourself for, having your parents as friends on Facebook is not really a bad thing. For me, having two Facebook accounts has good and bad sides, because certainly your parents will not know that this nickname is yours, but many of your friends will not know that either. So, if you have something to hide, just be careful of people you accept as friends, because your parents could also use a nickname, as you did.

36. On 03 March 2012, by Mehdi

I agree with Ines 🙄

37. On 03 March 2012, by Sara

I think it must be very embarrassing for the boy to know that his mother watches his facebook profile every day.
For me it is a virtual mother/son relationship because his mother satisfies her role as a mother watching his photos or talking with him on facebook.
I think she is wrong because she must let him live his life and leave him alone.
It was not a good idea from his mother when she sent a message on twitter telling his son not to see Jenny, I think his son is old enough to make decisions alone and he did not need his mother's advice.
In my opinion his mother is afraid of losing her son, so she tries to keep in touch with him through Facebook but she watches too much and that becomes a violation of his privacy.
My father and mother both have a facebook account and they are part of my friends' list.
My mother sometimes looks at my profile but she never goes as far as this boy's mother.

38. On 03 March 2012, by Sara

I agree with Maya: It is true that the behavior of his mother is not going to bring them any closer because, for me, the boy will move away from his mother ; I think he will not accept anymore that his mother interferes with his life.

39. On 03 March 2012, by Corentin

I agree with the coms which say this mother is like a spy. The children can't breathe, they must have a life without their mum spying. Maybe she wouldn't appreciate it if someone did this to her. The Twitter account is exaggerated, she doesn't trust her children, for me....

40. On 03 March 2012, by Nassim.A

I agree with Amine: Gloria had better talk to her son about facebook instead of secretly watching Jeff's profile.

41. On 03 March 2012, by Line.A

I totally agree with Ines. What she said about having our parents on Facebook is true. If you have nothing to reproach yourself for.... Why not have them as friends on Facebook ?

42. On 03 March 2012, by Corentin

The comment on youtube is not so bad but if the people who you flee find the 2 accounts what will you do?

43. On 04 March 2012, by Martin

I think the mother is too involved in her son's life : looking at his profile, sending him messages, and looking at photos of him six times a day. She should leave him having privacy in his life. I agree with Line because the mother doesn't have the right to spy on her son and to look at the pictures which concerns only him and his friends who are on the picture. My parents don't have accounts on Facebook. If they had one, I would not accept that they see my personal photos and information.

44. On 04 March 2012, by Martin

I still agree with the fact that she wants to maintain contact with her son because she is alone but without going too far.

45. On 04 March 2012, by E. Artault

I'm looking forward to read your reactions...

46. On 04 March 2012, by Rakib

In my opinion, this mom watches too much her son. I think that he can live his private life without his mom watching all the time. She should give him more freedom.

47. On 04 March 2012, by Sara

I agree with the remark : "some people will add their parents just to up their friends list". I think that some people only think of their friends' list and are even able to have friends they do not know.

48. On 04 March 2012, by Ahmed

In my opinion he CAN live his Life. Because he is an adolescent he can chat with who he wants.

49. On 04 March 2012, by Réadh

It's not nice what his mother did but she wants to protect her son.
And I think there is a limit for everything and his mother exceeded the limit of his son's private life ! 😞

50. On 04 March 2012, by Yacine

I agree with Rakib's comment.

51. On 04 March 2012, by Réadh

I agree with Ines but we all have our little secrets that parents shouldn't know !!! 😊😎

52. On 04 March 2012, by Julie

Mrs Artault, I don't think that is the best way. She should speak with her son and give him limits or advice instead of spying on him.

53. On 04 March 2012, by Sofiane

In my opinion, Gloria spends too much time on facebook to spy on her son.
I think her son is entitled to more freedom.
I think that he can live his private life without his mom watching all the time.

54. On 04 March 2012, by Sofiane

I agree with Julie, this is not the best way.

55. On 04 March 2012, by Souad

I totally agree with Martin, because I also think it's hard being away from her children but it's necessary not to go too far. Some day his mother will have to let him make his own life (without having his mother by his side) and be independent. It's useless to spy on him to keep contact with her son, there are other simpler means and which respect his intimacy. For example when he has to go to a university away from home, she can't verify any more everything he does. Also, I think that for example a child of our age, will not want his mother to continue spying on him 20 years later, so his mother shouldn't get used to spying on him.

56. On 04 March 2012, by E. Artault

Oooh, Readh, you don't look happy at all about this situation ! How I undersatnd you and the others !

57. On 04 March 2012, by cheick k

I think that he can live his private life without his mom watching all the time.

54.

58. On 04 March 2012, by cheick k

I agree with Julie, this is not the best way

59. On 04 March 2012, by Nissa

In my opinion, when Gloria looks at Jeff's pictures and comments, she discovers private things about her son which are better to never know.

I think this mother fears that her son moves away from her, that's why she keeps in touch with him like a mother who keeps an eye on her baby.

For Gloria, Jeff is still a young boy, he drinks too much "so drunk last night" (Gloria responds to his comment and advises him to check his tire pressure unless he wants to have an accident) and he has fun in his life (with different girls).

Gloria just wants to protect him like when she threatened Jenny.

I don't have fb (neither do my parents) for many reasons : I will never create an account exactly to avoid this kind of problem.

60. On 04 March 2012, by Claudio

I think this mother does not trust her son because she spends her time checking his facebook profile.

In my opinion having a family member as a friend on facebook is not a good idea because it prevents us from having a private life.

61. On 04 March 2012, by Claudio

I agree with Rakib, this mother should give to his son more freedom.

62. On 04 March 2012, by Cheyma

I agree a bit with Nissa when she says : "Gloria just wants to protect him like when she threatened Jenny."

Perhaps, the mom just wants to protect her son but she can do it in a more polite and proper way than she did. It wasn't really necessary to insult Jenny to make herself understood. In my opinion, it's better to let Jeff make mistakes in his youth, like this, thereafter he will know what he can do/can't do throughout his adult life.

Gloria is too oppressive with her son.

She should trust her son and let him have a private life. Jeff is no more a child and there are things he can tell his mom and things he can't. 😊

63. On 04 March 2012, by Emmanuelle Artault (Collège Jean Jaurès, Clichy (92))

@cheick k : Funny... it looks like I've already seen this comment somewhere...

64. On 04 March 2012, by Nissa

Yes Cheyma it's exactly what I mean.

For me, Gloria can protect him but if she really wants to protect him and let him make his life, she can give advice to her son without making it public on twitter (she can call her son and speak with him about his fun).

65. On 04 March 2012, by Cheyma

I don't totally agree with Claudio when he says:

"...having a family member as a friend on facebook is not a good idea because it prevents us from having a private life."

Of course, if they are family members like Gloria (well you know : oppressive ; intrusive ; negatively involved ; far too much inquisitive ; NOSY... etc) it's preferable not to accept them to keep your private life and your little secrets (like Réadh said it). But if you have nothing special to cover up you can add them as friends on Facebook, like this it could also up your friends' list. Fortunately I don't have a FB account (neither do my parents) so I don't meet this kind of problems. 😊

66. On 04 March 2012, by Rakib

I agree with Sofiane and Julie

67. On 04 March 2012, by Louis

I think this show is a trick for mothers or fathers with the objective to discover more information, if their daughter or their son do not have a strong relationship with their mother or father in real life.

68. On 04 March 2012, by B.Alex

His mother is stressful. The child has no privacy.

69. On 04 March 2012, by Alexis

In my opinion the mother always spies on her son and it's not a good thing for him. She's too worried by her son's private life.

70. On 04 March 2012, by Anand

I think the mother has reasons to worry for his son.

😄 LOL 😄

71. On 04 March 2012, by Sara

If i were the boy, I wouldn't delete my mother of my friends' list, but I would remove all the photos that could embarrass her not to have any problems with her.

72. On 04 March 2012, by Alexis

I agree with Claudio, this mother does not trust her son.

73. On 04 March 2012, by Louis

Yeah, the mother does not trust her son.

74. On 04 March 2012, by SABRINA

First I would like to say that my parents don't have a FB account because they think that it's time consuming. They prefer to use other means to contact their friends or family ; like calling or sending messages. I agree with them, that's why I don't have a profile.

I think Nissa is right, first she wants to protect him so she adds her son as a friend. It's a way of keeping an eye on him. She is a mother so I can understand this, but it's not the right way to watch over his son, for example she can talk with him, even if i know that the relationship between a mother and her son is often complicated. However when she says "I write to my son about five or six times per day " it's too much, for me. If i were the boy I'd prefer that she gives me advice but without making them public, because ok it's my mom, but she must give me more freedom. I believe that she wants to feel reassured, to say that her son has a healthy life, good friends etc. I agree to add her, but there is a thing which I can't accept : see my mother interfere in my private life. But if she trusts me she just lets me live my life. So for me Gloria acts just like any mother can do. She is protective but too much.

75. On 04 March 2012, by SABRINA

In my opinion the best thing to make is create a profile only reserved to the family and another reserved to friends.

Like that Gloria can talk with his son when she wants to and her son can publish all photos that he wants.

76. On 04 March 2012, by abdel-hadi

Yes miss Artault I sometimes communicate with my dad. I have lots of things to communicate with my close family about (sports, daily life, school ...).

77. On 04 March 2012, by abdel-hadi

I agree with Sabrina, I think it's a good solution to make a facebook profile just for family.

78. On 04 March 2012, by Martin

I absolutely agree with Sabrina to have two Facebook profiles : one for friends and privacy, and one for the family so that his mother could talk to him and keep in touch with her son without spying on him.

79. On 04 March 2012, by Martin

I don't agree with Sarah because I would not remove information or pictures just because a person often watches them. I think he'd better talk to his mother and ask her not to persist.

80. On 04 March 2012, by Line.A

I don't agree with Sabrina. I think having two accounts is not a good idea because your family may be angry when they discover that you have another account so they'll think that you hide something from them. At this moment, they will start spying on you to discover what they think you're hiding. You can simply have one account : each time that you post something that you don't want your family to see, you can hide it from them. I think that it's a better idea. I don't have two accounts on Facebook and I have my family as friends but each time I post something private, I hide it from them..and it works.

81. On 05 March 2012, by Amine

I don't agree with the mom because she uses a pseudo, so she is not controlling her son : she is spying on him.

82. On 05 March 2012, by Fabien

I quite agree with Mehdi's comment, of March 2.

83. On 05 March 2012, by Sara

I agree with Sabrina it's better to have two accounts : one for family and one for friends where you could put all your photos, but if I were the boy I would not do that because it will take twice as much time as usual.

I also agree with Line because when his mother discovers his other account, she will have even less confidence in him and will begin to spy on his other account.

84. On 05 March 2012, by E. Artault

Congratulations to you all for your comments 😊 but as I told you today, I'm a little disappointed because no one questioned this video. Here are a few more comments from Youtube :

- This is a joke!!! haha (riplearaelothian)

- The acting is just perfect, especially the mom. XD (Nekorin)

A new way to watch this video, maybe ? Don't forget to react ! I'd love to read your opinion.

Have a nice week.

85. On 10 March 2012, by Line.A

I think that this video is real and it has been broadcast on TV but the story of this mum is surely not true.

I think that the first comment is stupid because it's a real video... it's not a joke and yes, mothers spy on their children this way.

For the second one, I don't find this acting perfect. It's the opposite ! Spying on a child means that his/her mother doesn't trust his/her child enough to let him/her have his/her own private life. It shows that the relationship between them is very weak so that the child doesn't talk much about his private life with his mother. Also sending a message to the girl named Jenny is not perfect acting. It's an acting that only children or teenagers do and not a mum !

86. On 11 March 2012, by Julie

I think that the video has been broadcast on TV but that this video and the story of this mum is wrong. The first comment is stupid because I think that many mums are capable to spy on their children via the web. For the second comment, I find that the acting is not perfect because the mum looks curious to protect and to watch her children.

87. On 11 March 2012, by Nassim.A

I completely agree with Julie and Line.

I think, like them, that this video was shot by a real television program, but that all that Gloria said is wrong because people are ready to do anything to be on a TV program, even lie about one's own life.

And I think that Gloria is not this kind of person, but to be able to be on the television show, she was interested in his son Jeff's profile for, maximum, according to me, 3 days.

88. On 11 March 2012, by Nassim.A

And then, after she was on television, her son is 99 % sure to have seen the show and to be suspicious of her mother and to pay attention to the things that he publishes.

89. On 12 March 2012, by Sara

I think what riplearaelothia wanted to insinuate in his commentary is he doesn't believe a word of this story. I don't agree with him because I think there really are very protective parents (perhaps not as much as the mother in the video) especially mothers who have for example a single child who is already old and they are afraid to lose him too fast.

I think what Nekorin wanted to insinuate in his commentary is that he thinks this story has been staged. I'm not totally against this idea because after seeing several times the video, I noticed that the mother is not very credible because she smiles and laughs all the time whereas what she does (spy on his son's life through Facebook) is not very funny. I also think that a mother like Gloria Bianco, who monitors his son every day and who mingles with his private life and his love life, is hard to find.

90. On 14 March 2012, by Martin

I believe the comments that say it's a real video that was broadcast on television but I think this spy story is false.

I think (riplearalothian) meant that it was not a true story by saying that it was a joke but it was broadcast on TV anyway.

I think (Nekorin) wants to insinuate that this video has never been showed on TV and everything is invented because he says that the actors are perfect.

I therefore agree with (riplearalothian).

91. On 14 March 2012, by Marine

I personally think that the video is true because this mom was on television and moreover even the TV hosts looked bewildered by what she does. I don't believe it's a joke as riplearalothian does.

This mom's attitude can seem excessive but as Sara said it, Gloria Bianco is a very protective mother. She wants to remain close to him thanks to facebook. But this is not the good thing to be made because her son doesn't like that she is too present to look at what he does all the time.

For Nekorin's comment, In my opinion, it's true that Gloria Bianco's attitudes can seem exaggerated. It is necessary to remind oneself that it is the television and things are amplified all the time in an extreme way.

92. On 14 March 2012, by Sheherazade

I think that the video can be true because this mom can spy on her son and have an informal language. However it's too excessive when she posts on twitter that she wants to kill the girl who's named Jenny. I don't really think that a mom will stoop to doing this.

93. On 14 March 2012, by Souad

I think this video was really shown on TV but it's a comedy so that the mother's story is false.

In my opinion the first comment is absurd because there really are parents who spy on their children on the Internet.

As for the second comment, I think the acting is not perfect because she is constantly smiling and showing enthusiasm, she's proud of what she does.

It's a bad example to show the public that a mother spies and reveals the personal pictures of her son. Also I feel that she controls her son's life and talking with his friends as if she knew them shows that she doesn't trust her son.

I think it's not a real story. But it's possible that a mom spies on her boy like that. But I don't think this mom spies on her son. It's a comedy.

I think that this video was not on tv because it must be annoying for the son where we reveal his deprived life and if it is the case then I say that the mother has no protective attitude because for her son it is a total humiliation. It is going to break family links instead of strengthening them. 😞

I agree with Nekorin because the mother isn't natural, She answers too quickly. And If this story is true, then her son has no chance !!! 😞

Sara, you're right !! 😊

I agree with Rakib and Réadh it's not a real story. We can see that it is false and that it is played. The mother exaggerates too much when she speaks.

Souad, When Nekorin said "The acting is just perfect, especially the mom. XD", this is irony !

I agree with Rakib I think it is not a true story. I think they're actors.
We can see that Gloria has only two friends which demonstrates that this is not a true story. And then if we don't have any problems with our parents, I can't see any problems with adding them. And in my opinion I think if your mother posts something on your wall like "DEAR JEFF, YOU DIDN'T CALL THIS WEEKEND BUT THAT'S OK. I HOPE YOU'RE HAVING FUN WITH YOUR FRIENDS SINCERELY, MOM" you won't like it. So I can't see any problems if we add our parents but they must be discreet and not spy on us.
Ps: Mdrrr Loïc "because déjà"... mdr pas mal

I don't think this video is a joke. I think it was really broadcast on TV and I think the woman who played the mom was an actress. But I don't agree with the second comment, I don't think that the acting is perfect, I think it's a bad idea to spy on one's child.

I think this actress is a mother who does not respect her son's privacy to convey a message to parents who do not respect their children's privacy.

I agree with these comments. I think it's really a joke and the acting is perfect.

I think this video is real but I don't believe the story of the mother, I think. So the first comment is useless because it's a broadcast TV.

And for the second I think the acting is not perfect because a real mother doesn't speak like the actress.

I agree with all the comments.

In my opinion if a mother spies on her child, she doesn't show it to all America on tv and I'm sure Jeffrey doesn't want to see his mom on tv who speaks about him and his private life.

Gloria enjoys facebook very much, she is very happy for nothing (maybe it's a commercial which encourages moms to create an account on fb or twitter to spy on their child).
